Much anxiety prevails as to whether the Senate will ratify the treaty No doubt members of the Committee on Foreign Relations now here, have been made acquainted in confidence with the treaty provisions and furnished with both oral and documentary information upon the subject Precautions will be taken to prevent premature publication of documents It is said the Senate in such case will order an investigation on the ground of breach of privilege

The monthly earnings and expenses of the Union Pacific Railroad Company for the first quarter of the year have been as follows

1871	Earnings	Expenses

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue holds that every person manufacturing fermented liquors of any kind for sale is liable to special tax as a brewer and that all fermented liquors not coming under the exemption of root beer is liable to a duty of $1 per barrel This exemption is held to apply only to such fermented liquors as contain two and a half per cent or less of alcohol and is aimed to reach the large number of brewers of hop beer in New England and the Middle States

A PLEASONTON Com'r

The Census Bureau to-day in compliance with a resolution of the Senate of last session, furnished complete returns of the last census, which will only be subject to a few slight changes in Western townships The total population of the States is 38 104 840, of the Territories and District of Columbia, 442 694 total, 38 547 534 The social and industrial statistics are in such an incomplete state requiring so many corrections alterations, and amendments, that it is not expected they will be ready for one year.

The dissatisfied section of the working classes in England are speaking out pretty plainly There is not much excuse for misunderstanding their sentiments They go to public meetings and shout for a republic, and they mob members of Parliament on their way to Westminster Hall A favorite journal with the poor is Reynolds' Newspaper, and when the infant son of the Prince of Wales died recently it headed its account of the event a "Happy Release" and told the story in the following pleasant manner "We have much satisfaction in announcing that the newly born child of the Prince and Princess of Wales died shortly after its birth, thus relieving the working classes of England from having to support hereafter another addition to the long roll of State beggars they at present maintain."

POLITICAL NOTES

The Charleston (S C) Republican says "We believe that the most speedy and effectual remedy for the Ku Klux troubles would have been a mixture of amnesty and bayonets—the former lavish the latter vigorous"

The colored men are asking for their rights in Cincinnati and demand a certain proportion of appointments on the police force The Mayor recognizes the justice of the claim and has agreed to accede to their request

At Stockton (Cal) last week the Republicans elected their entire municipal ticket The majority for Mayor was 305 and for Chief of Police, 38 The principal interior cities of California, Sacramento, Stockton, Marysville and San Jose have all been carried by the Republicans this spring There is much reason to hope that the Republicans will sweep the State in September

The Baltimore American says "The people of the United States have read the address which fourteen Democratic Senators and forty eight members of the House of Representatives of the same political persuasion were kind enough to prepare for them and have been but little edified thereby Considering the tremendous array of talent employed in drawing up the document it is but a sorry production and scarcely takes rank with the average platforms adopted by rural Democratic conventions The statements it contains are all loose generalizations with which everybody has been familiar for the last five years

The Joint High Commission

OPINIONS OF THE BRITISH PRESS ON THE EXPECTED SETTLEMENT

From the London Times April 1[illegible]

Fortunately for their own peace, if not so fortunately for their reputation the United States stand geographically apart from the family of nations and being thus isolated from the complications of an European system can afford to subordinate foreign relations to questions of domestic politics or even to the satisfaction of disputes It is possible, though not probable that the labors of the Joint High Commission may be nullified as a sacrifice to wounded dignity, or by way of atonement for party divisions

Above all things it is imperative that the proposed arrangement be made internationally binding prospectively as well as retrospectively, on both England and America alike

From the Manchester Guardian April 13

The depredations on American commerce committed by the Alabama and her sister cruisers supply a more complicated theme of controversy No one in this country has ever been able to doubt that resentment for the extensive sympathy with the Southern Confederation displayed by English public opinion during the civil war has caused the American claim to compensation for losses alleged to have arisen out of the negligence or culpability of our Government to be pressed with a vigor which no material injury would have inspired While this feeling has existed on one side it has been imperative on us to guard against any concession to special circumstances which might justly be represented as an enforced surrender of self respect

From the Pall Mall Gazette April 13

In the long run the advantages of a settlement of the question which involves the formation and definition of the class of neutral liabilities are undoubtedly with Great Britain The history of our times is full of surprises but nothing is less probable than the recurrence of another war in which the Americans will be belligerents and the English neutrals If we have to fight the Americans themselves the new rules will be of no consequence but they will have extreme importance if we are involved in a continental war in which the Americans take no part

From the London Daily News April 12

The worst feature of the Alabama difficulty was the possibility it enfolded of future quarrel In any naval war the ports of the United States might have covered the seas with Alabamas and though our navy would probably give an account of them which would soon have made the venture too dangerous even for trans Atlantic enterprise, we might have found a war with the United States almost inevitable The settlement of our international relations on a principle to which both sides agree removes this danger It atones for the past and guarantees the future The mere details of its present application are altogether of minor importance

Conclusion of the Fair Trial

The following is the concluding portion of Judge Dwinelle's charge in the Fair case

You can, in determining the question of sanity or insanity consider all of the evidence given either on behalf of the prosecution or the prisoner, and apply to the facts and circumstances developed your knowledge of human nature and the tendencies of the human mind, and thereby ascertain whether or not she was at the time the mortal wound was committed responsible for the act "If it be shown that the intellectual faculties were so impaired as to produce a general habitual derangement of them not traceable to some temporary cause the law would presume the mind to have continued in the same condition until the contrary was shown but the principle is different in reference to temporary or periodical insanity resulting from some transient cause for then the presumption would be that the mind was restored to its normal condition when the disturbing element had ceased to operate"

To constitute a crime the accused must have been acted upon by motives and governed by will in its commission In the legal sense a person bereft of reason cannot act upon motives or be governed by will

On a trial for murder the accused is presumed to be sane until the contrary is made to appear by the evidence and if insanity is relied upon as a defense, it must be established affirmatively by a preponderance of proof

If gentlemen under the principles of law you have been instructed upon you find from the evidence the prisoner killed the deceased Alexander P Crittenden at the time, place and in the manner charged in the indictment or before the same was found by the Grand Jury, and that in such killing there was a malicious, deliberate, premeditated attempt on the part of the prisoner to take the life of the deceased and the deceased died within a year and a day after the fatal injury was inflicted you will find her guilty of murder, or if you find from the evidence after applying the principles of law as you have been instructed the prisoner killed the deceased at the time place and in the manner charged in the indictment or at any time before the same was found by the Grand Jury without any considerable provocation and that such killing showed an abandoned and malignant heart, you will find her guilty of murder

In determining the questions of malice deliberation and premeditation you can consider, in connection with the other evidence threats made by her when she was sane, if she uttered any, any preparation she made to accomplish the fatal result any disguise of her person her action on the ferry boat before and after the shooting, and the motives by which she was actuated

In the event you agree upon a conviction of the prisoner, you will state by your verdict if she be guilty of murder in the first degree murder in the second degree or guilty of manslaughter If you find she is not guilty you will so declare by your verdict

In determining the credibility of the witnesses who have testified in your presence—and the same principles apply to the prisoner who has been a witness on her own behalf—you can take into consideration their appearance and deportment on the witness stand when testifying the probability of the truth of their statements independently of or in connection with the other evidence adduced their anxiety or interest in the result of this trial their friendly or hostile feelings towards the prisoner to what extent they have been corroborated or contradicted by the oral or written evidence, as well as their means of knowledge From the fact that a rule cannot be established for testing the truthfulness of witnesses which would be applicable to every case the law permits jurors to test their credibility according to their best knowledge of the laws governing human action

You will carefully consider all the facts and circumstances of the case as detailed by the evidence Your deliberations should be calm and serious, be not influenced by passion or prejudice—you cannot be without doing injustice to the prisoner, to society, or to yourselves

Believing gentlemen you will act dispassionately and justly the case is now submitted to your consideration

Below we give the final proceedings

At the conclusion of the charge the Deputy Sheriff was sworn and retired with the jury at twenty minutes after 3 o'clock

The Court then took a recess for half an hour The crowd lingered and discussed the probable verdict and the length of time the jury would be out Many seemed confident that the jury would acquit while others said they were positive the jury would not agree

The curious swarmed around Mrs Fair and stood gawking and peering into her face during the whole time the jury were out

At five minutes after 4 o'clock the jury came into Court and took their seats in the jury box They were preceded by Cook who whispered something (probably the verdict of the jury) in Mrs Fair's ear She turned a trifle paler than usual and her head dropped to one side but otherwise she did not seem to be affected by the intelligence The excitement among the audience was intense and they climbed up on benches and the backs of chairs in order to obtain a view of the scene which all felt would ensue

Judge Dwinelle took his seat upon the bench As soon as the police officers had procured silence he directed the clerk to ask the jury if they had agreed upon a verdict

Clerk — Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict

B F Sterrett, the foreman replied, advancing to the railing We have

Clerk—"What is your verdict

Foreman—"Guilty as charged in the indictment [Sensation]

Clerk — And so say you all?

Court—"Stop Mr Clerk Mr Cook I suppose you know I have no right to talk to the jury except in writing [Smiling]

The Court then wrote the following and handed it to the jury

Gentlemen of the jury You are instructed to state by your verdict if you convicted the prisoner whether she was guilty of murder in the first degree murder in the second degree or manslaughter You should so state

Foreman — We find the prisoner guilty of murder in the first degree

Court—"Mr Clerk poll the jury

The Judge then wrote the following which he read to the jury

Gentlemen of the jury If the verdict stated by your foreman is not your verdict you will so state when you are asked when being polled each individual juror state when your name is called

The clerk then read the verdict and calling each juror by name asked him if that was his verdict? All replied, It is

When the ominous words "Guilty of murder in the first degree" fell from the foreman's lips, Mrs Fair's little daughter who seemed to comprehend their full meaning broke forth in a violent fit of sobbing She leaned over upon her mother and her child like cry of anguish pierced every heart Her paroxysm of grief became so violent that she sprang from her chair and fell in her mother's lap her little arms encircling Mrs Fair's neck She continued in this position until the court adjourned

The scene was a most affecting one Several of the jurors were affected to tears and even Judge Dwinelle had difficulty in retaining command of his voice

Judge Dwinelle then ordered the Clerk to record the verdict

Cook asked his honor if this was a special or regular term of the court and on being informed that it was a regular term, he asked that he be given until the [illegible] of May to prepare and submit a statement of the exceptions on which to base a motion for a new trial

After considerable discussion between counsel the Judge stated that the judgment and sentence of the Court would be deferred till the 29th day of May He ordered that the counsel for the prisoner prepare in writing or print the statement on which they would base their motion for a new trial and that it be submitted to District Attorney [illegible] Campbell or Judge [illegible] on or before the 18th of May

Judge Dwinelle then addressed the jury [illegible] on behalf of the people thanked them for the faithful manner in which they had performed their duty He said he had been [illegible] for the course he had taken with them in keeping them together—but he thought his action had been approved by the people and he had met with their approbation He felt that it was a universal feeling that they had [illegible] or tampered with There should be a general law and at the next session of the Legislature he should recommend that one be passed that jurors who had served on such a case as the one just tried and had been kept together as they had been a month should be relieved from further jury duty for their natural life

The court was then adjourned until Saturday at 10 o'clock A M

Apparently the labor of our [illegible] Committee are about ended We have examined the result accomplished to date In view of the great and vital interests at stake it is absurdly meager and discouraging

Growth and Value of Immigration.

A special report on immigration has just been issued by the Bureau of Statistics at Washington, which is more comprehensive and useful than any similar document ever issued in this country. Prior to year 1820 no official records were kept of the influx of foreign population into this country, but it is estimated that between 1776 and 1820 an aggregate of 250,000 persons transferred their allegiance from other countries to the United States. The aggregate number of immigrants who arrived here between October 1, 1819, and December 30, 1870, is 7,553,865; and if the 250,000 estimated as arriving previous to the first-named date be included, the total number of aliens who have been permanently added to our population by direct immigration, since the formation of the Government, will reach 7,803,865. More than one-half of these have come from the United Kingdom and its Colonies, the German element embracing two-thirds of the remainder. The latter, with Scandinavians, are now taking the lead of all others, and they are of special value, being at once an industrious and an intelligent people, a large proportion settling in rural districts and developing the agricultural resources of the West and South, while the remainder, consisting largely of artisans and skilled workmen, find profitable employment in the cities and manufacturing towns. The Chinese have formed only about four per cent. of our total immigration. The Latin [illegible] nations have also contributed but a small per centage, but there is reason to look for an increased influx of the former, as a consequence of the wreck and ruin in France, wrought by the recent war.

Mr. Kapp, one of the Commissioners of Immigration at New York City, furnishes valuable data for estimating the value of immigration which is incorporated in this report. He lays down the rule that "an emigrant is worth as much to this country as it costs to produce a native-born laborer of the same average quality." The cost of an American [illegible] skilled laborer for the first fifteen years of his life is estimated at about $1,500, and that of a female of the same age about $750. Assuming, then, the immigrants to be half males and half females, the average personal value of each to the country is equal to $[illegible] by saving on the cost of living for the first fifteen years, in the case of all above this age, which includes five-sixths of the whole number. The cash capital brought with each immigrant for an average is about $[illegible], which, being added to the previous average gives $1,198 per head as the value of each one to the country above fifteen years of age. It is estimated that the increment to our national wealth from immigration exceeds $[illegible]. The report says truly, that it is impossible to make an intelligent estimate of the value to the country of those foreign born citizens who brought their educated minds, their cultivated tastes, their skill in the arts and their inventive genius. In almost every walk of life their influence has been felt. Alike in the fearful ordeal of war and in the pursuits of peace, in our Legislative halls and in the various learned professions the adopted sons of America have attained eminence." The report contains much useful instruction for immigrants landing on our shores undecided where to turn their steps, and also affords not less valuable information to our own countrymen, indicating the nature of the influx of immigrants and the localities to which they are chiefly attracted.

Visions of 1900.

The President recently transmitted to Congress, in compliance with a resolution passed by that body, the report of Samuel B. Ruggles, Delegate in 1869 to the International Congress at the Hague, containing a comparison of the growth of population in Europe and the United States, and speculations as to future increase. For the past thirty or forty years Mr. Ruggles has been figuring about our internal and domestic commerce, and although he has often been accused of romancing in figures, the facts have always sustained his predictions. When, therefore, the ablest, most experienced and most trustworthy statistician now living tells us that we shall have a population of 75,000,000 in 1900 [illegible] the younger part of the present generation may [illegible] consider what awaits them in their [illegible] and old age.

Seventy-five millions of people in the United States, observes an Eastern journal in commenting on this report, means the settlement of the entire South and West by as dense a population as that of Massachusetts; the reclamation of the arid wastes of the great plains by irrigation; the development of [illegible] as strong as Ohio, Indiana and Illinois along the Rocky Mountains; the settlement of the great Utah Basin by four or five millions of an agricultural and pastoral people; the development of a tier of agricultural States along our Northern border, from Lake Superior to the Pacific, as populous and prosperous as Missouri and Minnesota; the growth of the Pacific States into commonwealths as rich and populous as New York and Pennsylvania. It means that New York will cover the whole of Manhattan Island, with a population of at least two millions, to say nothing of the outlying suburbs in New Jersey and across the East river; that Chicago and St. Louis will each become as large [illegible] in fact as they are now in their own estimation; that San Francisco will have half a million of inhabitants, and that we shall have a city here with its one hundred and fifty thousand people and a State with three-quarters of a million. The national debt will have become a tradition, and it will be difficult to understand how it was ever hard to raise three or four hundred millions a year by taxation.

Growth of the Postal Service.

The Washington Chronicle has an interesting article on the growth of the postal service since the days of Benjamin Franklin, who was appointed General deputy postmaster in 1753, "with a salary between him and his confederates of £600, if they could get it." During these slow coach times, and for a quarter of a century later, the Department consisted of the Deputy Postmaster, who kept his own accounts in pounds, shillings and pence. There were less than fifty post-offices, and but a few hundred miles of post routes throughout the country. One hundred years later finds this establishment grown, with the growth of the nation, to enormous proportions. It now embraces nine distinct bureaus, each devoted to a special branch of the postal service, and employing 300 clerks and directs the conduct of a postal service covering more than 13,000 mail routes, 224,000 miles in extent. The accounts of 7,300 mail contractors and 29,000 postmasters are inspected and settled by an auditor of the Treasury, with nine chiefs of divisions and 150 clerks, and so great and constant is the demand for additional mail service that the force employed and the building itself will soon be totally inadequate for the purpose.

"'I Dare Not,' Waiting upon 'I Would'"

The leading feature of political discussion at this time is the controversy that is going on between the "impracticables" and the "policy men" of the Democratic party about their next platform. The Louisville Courier-Journal has the following deliverance on the subject. That paper is evidently "on the fence;" it is among those who "let 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would;'" yet the animus of its article is plain:

> No Democrat is asked to accept negro suffrage or abate his aversion to the Fifteenth Amendment. We have already made our protest against the one and the other. Each is, until it be set aside, a fixed fact. The record of the past is made up. The question presented to us now is this: Shall we make the repeal of the Fifteenth Amendment and the abolition of negro suffrage an issue in the Presidential election? One thing, in our opinion is certain. We should take a decided stand. We should avoid any attitude of equivocation by which we shall lose all the advantages of a war on negro suffrage, if there is any advantage in that, and gain all the discredit of a secret revolutionary purpose which we dare not avow. The Republicans have made a point upon us squarely, and we cannot escape or evade it. But, whatever we do, let us dig no pitfalls to entrap our own unwary footsteps.

Grasshopper Jim is evidently taking a hand at the editorial bellows of the "organ" again. The inane drivel of the leader of Sunday morning, entitled "A Medical Question," fully justifies this supposition. For pointless vapidity that article has rarely been equalled anywhere; yet the writer evidently supposed that he was delivering a witty and admirable production.

A Washington dispatch of the 23d April states that on that day the claims of B. F. Dowell and B. J. Drew, amounting to over $50,000, for money expended in the Rogue River Indian war, were paid at the Treasury. Mr. Dowell has been working for these and other claims for several years, and has been very successful.

OREGON.

It is said that the loss by the railroad accident near Salem will be $15,000.

Barst, the convict who recently escaped from the Penitentiary, was seen in Yamhill county last week, but escaped pursuit.

Contracts have been let for building the projected road from Douglas county through to Coos Bay. The company has a land grant.

The West-Side reports that the present "rage" in Yamhill is a common passion to obtain bands of cattle and to put them on the range East of the mountains.

A project is on foot to bring into the Myrtle Creek mines, in Douglas county, a large ditch which will afford an adequate supply of water and make mining profitable.

The West-Side delivers some excellent advice to those who are putting up the price of lands beyond all precedent and reason. It says that such extravagant figures will drive away all substantial investments.

From the Statesman: A. A. McCully, Esq., has purchased of the State the property known as the residence of ex-Secretary May, for $6,333. Mr. McCully and family intend to return and make Salem their permanent home, with this beautiful mansion as a residence.

The Statesman considers the litigant law, closing its article thus: The Herald claims that in the line of its duty it must do the city printing. It is the appointed litigant organ, and when the work comes in we cannot see how it can well decline grinding it out. When it comes to collecting the bill the city can fall back on its privileges under the Civil Rights Bill, which we verily believe the litigant law transgresses. At least the city should contest the bill and set up the plea that its enormity transcends reason which must be the basis of all law. Some one should try the validity of the litigant law, and it strikes us forcibly that the city of Portland is the very individual to do it.

AN OYSTER WAR.—There is danger of war between Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The latter nation has enacted a law that nobody except its own citizens, shall be allowed to fish for oysters, or even be employed upon any vessel engaged in the gathering of oysters, in any of the waters of that puissant country, even though they have paid for and received a license issued under the laws of the State. A formidable navy has been fitted out, consisting of one vessel, armed with a swivel, for the purpose of enforcing the law. "A system of terrorism," avows a Philadelphia paper, "is exercised." The New Jersey officials have even dared to drive from the sacred soil and waters of the State a worthy colored oyster fisherman, a citizen of Philadelphia, where he has fled for safety, "destitute and penniless." Of course, such conduct cannot be tolerated; and the Philadelphia Press demands that the "whole power of the Government" shall be called forth "to protect the Pennsylvanian in his rights." Diplomacy has sought, unavailingly, to adjust this difficulty. The Pennsylvania Legislature went down on its knees to the Legislature of New Jersey, and passed a resolution requesting it to repeal the obnoxious law; but the haughty Jerseymen deigned no reply to the petition. Now that Congress has adjourned without legislating on the subject, we shall wait to see if the hot-blooded Pennsylvanians will brook further submission to these outrages on the part of their diminutive neighbor, or whether the war-power of the commonwealth will be invoked to give its citizens "fair play and sailor's rights" in the waters of its Sister Republic.

GREELEY'S INDUSTRY.—Horace Greeley is an "awful worker," as editorial writer on the Tribune and otherwise. We do not know that last week was busier for him than usual, according to the notices and reports published from day to day in the New York papers, he must have had an active time of it. On Monday evening he delivered a political speech; on Tuesday evening he delivered an agricultural address; on Wednesday evening he delivered a temperance discourse; on Thursday evening he delivered a lecture on "Wit;" on Friday evening he delivered a speech on the tariff; on Saturday he went out as usual to his farm at Chappaqua, where, by a night's repose, he probably recruits his energies and his tongue for the campaign of the present week. His lecturing on all those prodigious topics was but a small part of his week's labors. He also wrote nearly the whole of the editorial page of the Tribune which is work in itself for at least a dozen ordinary able bodied men. He also furnished articles for we can't tell how many weekly papers, on questions of theology, reform, and intellecual progress. He also occupied a great part of the time in attempts to settle the distractions of the Republican party in New York. What other duties he may have been engaged in we are unable to discover by the newspapers. We have no doubt that during all this time he slept as soundly, lived as simply, chopped as nobly, and dressed as handsomely as usual.—Cincinnati Commercial, March 21.

The New York Mercantile Journal replies as follows to Mr. Cox's inquiry: "What Republican has brought in a bill to carry out the President's recommendation of specie payments?" "With all due respect, we inform Mr. Cox and those who may echo his inquiry, that the most prominent member on the Administration side and one who is understood to be on most confidential terms with it, has brought in just such a bill; and one calculated, unlike some others that have been offered, to effect this object without forced contraction. The bill alluded to (H. B. 28) was, on motion of Gen. Butler, referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency."

Shoo-Fly garters are coming into fashion, and are said to be decidedly nobby, but pretty high.

THE TERRITORIES.

S. W. Beall has been appointed Justice of the Peace at Kalama.

Walters, convicted of [illegible] at Lewiston, recently, is to be hung Friday, the 9th of June.

The Port Discovery Mill Company at Puget Sound recently lost a boom of logs containing 400,000 feet.

The amount of land disposed of at the Vancouver Land Office during April was 7,450 acres. Much the larger part was homesteads and pre-emptions.

Montana now produces grain in abundance. The military authorities there recently purchased 2,000,000 pounds at about $2 50 per 100 pounds.

The assessment of Thurston county, W. T., including the town of Olympia, for the year 1871, foots up to $1,300,400. This is an increase of about $200,000 over last year.

A young man in Walla Walla, a blacksmith, who has worked at his trade there for some time, received information last week that a distant relative, recently deceased, had left him a legacy of $200,000.

The assessment of Clarke County, W. T., just completed, shows assessable property of the value of $892,890. The assessment for 1870 was in round numbers $676,000, showing an increase in the past year of $216,000.

The property-holders at Seattle, says the paper published at that place, hold themselves in readiness to give the N. P. R. R. company, when its main road is constructed to the town, about one third of the town site as well as 10,000 acres of land contiguous thereto.

An Idaho grand jury reports that the crime of embracery is growing frightfully common in Owyhee county. They return only one case, but are morally satisfied of the guilt of many others. The nature of the transaction makes it hard to get at the direct evidence of guilt.

The tax at Olympia for municipal and county purposes for the present year are as follows: Municipal, 5 mills; interest on town debt, 2½ mills; county, 7 mills; school, 3 mills; total, 17½ on the dollar. A pretty good burden for a community no farther advanced in permanent improvements.

From the Walla Walla Statesman: We are informed, by what we consider reliable authority, that it has been finally settled that the Northern Pacific will not pass through this valley. Such being the case, it behooves us to strain every nerve and put forth all our energies to the end that our local road shall be pushed forward to an early completion.

The San Francisco Alta has an interesting article on Golden Chariot (Owyhee) stock. From this we learn that it has fallen from $920,000 total value in December last, to $330,000 in April. During that time the dividends have been $17,000. The highest dividend was in February—$17 per share. There was no dividend for March. Somebody has suffered in this collapse.

At Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, on the 21st of April, one Boyer, a Cheyenne brave, after being duly tried by a lawful court and jury, was hanged in proper form. It is indeed some proof of the progress of civilization and the triumph of justice, when an Indian can be tried and executed for the murder of a white man right in the heart of the region where white ruffianism recently held undisputed sway.

CITY.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKETS.—We clip from market reports received by the Stephens, the following paragraphs

Bacon.—Arrivals overland are now in order. During the week several car loads of sugar-cured hams and bacon sides have been received from Chicago—part green meats, brought over in bulk. We have before stated that Thomas Cross & Sons, of Oregon, were packing in Chicago for this market. Since then we learn that J. Wilson & Co., of this city, have also established a packing house in Chicago for a like purpose, but chiefly with a view to the more satisfactory fulfillment of their contracts with the government. This they were compelled to do, owing to the high price and short supply of hogs upon this coast. A year ago we had, with Oregon's assistance, a full supply of bacon sides and sugar cured hams; so much so, that we were enabled to sell freely to Utah purchasers. But this season Oregon is withholding her supplies for home use, and our people find that they can purchase heavy bacon sides in Chicago at 10½@ in currency, and these can now be laid down here at a handsome profit. The fear is now expressed that the business is likely to be very much overdone, particularly as concerns sugar cured. We are now fully supplied with goods in quantities, from Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, etc., and in consequence of the multiplicity of the many various brands, [illegible] can be effected except at considerable reduction from rates heretofore ruling. We note the arrival from Chicago of 270 cases [illegible]—now offering upon the market. The arrivals above noted consist of five car-loads—in part, 1,175 sides, to Wilson and to Cross & Sons, 103 bags and 15 tcs. These are exclusive of other parcels to dealers and importers. During the past few days [illegible] Oregon bacon have been sold at full [illegible].

Wool.—Our wool-growers are now reaping vast monetary benefits from the spring clip, the average price paid being nearly 33⅓ per cent. greater than that of last year. The price is highly remunerative to the people of this coast, and must result in adding great wealth to those engaged in the business, besides stimulating the people to increased organization of their flocks. The bulk of the wool now being marketed is greedily purchased by Eastern capitalists and manufacturers, acting as for the express purpose. They are thus scattering millions of dollars to enrich the people of this coast; though, in doing so, we fear they will deprive our local manufacturers of the necessary stock for the successful working of their woolen mills.

Building Materials—Arrivals of Puget Sound and Eureka lumber are free and stocks considerable, but prices not altogether settled. Cargoes of lumber rough approximate $14, dressed, $24; [illegible] $18 50; Redwood, rough, $15. The mill rates with cargo sales from northern ports, is [illegible] for timber; $18@20 for flooring. The standing cargo rates for Redwood lumber have been [illegible] by the R. W. Lumber Association, rough, $15, surfaced, $26; tongued and grooved, $28; tongued and grooved, beaded, $28.

[illegible] of certain articles of Oregon produce from January 1st to date, have been as follows: Flour, qr sks, 237,238; wheat, sks, 23,-[illegible]; oats, sks, 373, salmon, bbls, 1,538; hf bbls, [illegible]; beef, bbls, 141; hams, pkgs, 170; [illegible] 112, lard, pkgs, 313, pork, bbls, [illegible]; dried apples, pkgs, 625; ripe do, bxs, 27,-[illegible].

Beef and Pork—The market is supplied from [illegible] local packers at our quotations, say: [illegible] clear, bbls, $30; do do hf bbls $16; [illegible], per bbl, $26; do, prime, mess, per bbl, [illegible], in bbls, from $14 to $18; smoked [illegible].

Butter, Cheese and Eggs—The supplies of roll [illegible] do not equal the demand. We quote [illegible] choice new California butter, 25@32½c as [illegible]; cheese, 10@14c; California eggs, 27½c; [illegible].

From April 1st to date, we have received from [illegible], 9,543 bbls flour and 12,391 sks wheat. [illegible] receipts have met buyers at highly remunerative prices.

Hides—The market, like wool, is excited; 19c [illegible] for California dry, and 9½c for salted; with [illegible] the week of about 2,500.

[illegible] A few choice Oregon are held at 3@ [illegible], State, dull of sale at 1½@2c per lb.

CROSS' SUGAR-CURED HAMS.—Coals have returned, now, to New Castle. The last steamer brought to J. O'Connor & Co., a lot of Cross' [illegible] cured hams. The veteran pork-packer, who has made for Oregon hams a name [illegible] wherever, almost, hams are eaten, comes [illegible] from Chicago, and Oregon buys from [illegible] through whom, only a little [illegible] ago, he sold. Mr. Cross went to Chicago [illegible] Oregon [illegible] not (it could) raise hogs [illegible] his business. He changed his base [illegible] Oregon changes its base. It is such a [illegible]: "Cross' sugar-cured," that we suppose [illegible] should go to Hong Kong, we [illegible] Cross' Hong Kong sugar-cured hams. [illegible] find ourselves looking over Hong [illegible] to ascertain the prospects of [illegible], with a view to calculating how [illegible] we should be called upon to pay for Cross' sugar-cured. We trust, however, that Mr. Cross [illegible] be compelled to go out of Oregon to [illegible] stock he wants to supply our own as [illegible] our neighbors' markets. The hams received by Mr O'Connor are from corn-fed pigs, killed [illegible] age of nine months, and they are neatly [illegible] wrappers and packed dry in casks. Of [illegible] quality we have no need to speak—Cross [illegible] put up anything but the best.

TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO.—We met with Mr. [illegible] D. Applegate, a day or two since, and while [illegible] on the steamship dock, he remarked that [illegible] time (and first, too) he was in Portland [illegible] French brig lay stranded on the bank near, [illegible], where we were then walking, [illegible] our walk to the lower end of the dock, [illegible] pointed out to him the place where that same [illegible] lies, at the bottom of the river, and [illegible] spot upon which she was lying when he saw [illegible] twenty-eight years ago. Mr. Applegate went [illegible] remark that the place was most wonderful [illegible] what he saw then, and that no man [illegible] have then believed that a prosperous and [illegible] thriving city would, in twenty-eight [illegible] thereafter, stand here in place of the wilderness of 1843. As well as he could remember, [illegible] cabin was the only building in sight [illegible] where the brig lay—all the rest a forest [illegible] Mr. Applegate, then a boy, went with his father's family to Southern Oregon, and [illegible] that time till last Saturday, had not been [illegible] Portland than Salem. He found it one [illegible] difficulties of his life to realize the [illegible] changes which time had effected.

EXPORTS OF WHEAT.—Since the 1st of October the value of wheat shipped from this port to [illegible], has been $283,502 10. One cargo has been shipped to Rio Janeiro, valued at [illegible]. Considerable quantities of wheat [illegible] have also been shipped to British Columbia, Honolulu, &c. One whole cargo and [illegible] parts of cargoes sent down the river on [illegible], transferred to sea-going vessels and [illegible] from Astoria for foreign ports, are not [illegible] in the above values. The total value of [illegible] and flour shipped from this river to foreign [illegible] since the 1st of October last, will [illegible] say below $350,000. Of coastwise [illegible], no complete account can be obtained, [illegible] they must exceed the foreign.

THE "JUNE RISE."—The annual "June rise" [illegible] Columbia has begun this year in May, [illegible] the river is already swelling rapidly. The [illegible] rise at this city is about three feet from [illegible] lowest water of this spring. It is generally [illegible] that there will be high water, as deep [illegible] are reported as lying on the mountains in [illegible] the Columbia has its source.

[illegible].—Among the patents issued during the week ending April 11th, was one to [illegible] W. Tuthill, for a wheel-barrow frame. [illegible] frame, if we recollect rightly, is constructed [illegible] of tube iron, thus combining great [illegible] with lightness.

CIRCUS.—We learn that the New York circus, under the management of Messrs. Kingsley and [illegible], will open in this city in about two [illegible]. Several of the performers are now in [illegible] city and others are en route by the steamer [illegible] sailed on Saturday.

A PRESENT TO THE LIBRARY.—Mr. Oxer, Librarian of the Portland Library, acknowledges [illegible] presentation to the rooms, of a beautiful set [illegible], by Messrs. J. W. Masters and J. [illegible].

THE STEAMER CONSTANTINE.—This steamer, [illegible] on the way here, is a propeller of 319 67 tons [illegible]. She is therefore something less than [illegible] the size of the Geo. S. Wright.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

It will be remembered that a man named William B. Bird, who had been a soldier in the U. S. army, was convicted some three months ago by a court-martial at Vancouver of a homicide perpetrated at Sitka, and sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor at Alcatraz. The findings and sentence of the court were forwarded to Washington, but were disapproved by the Secretary of War, who returned them, on the ground that the military had no right to try the man, and with instructions that he should be handed over to the civil authorities. Accordingly he was brought back here Sunday night on the John L. Stephens and placed in the custody of Chief Lappeus. It appears that at the time of the homicide at Sitka he was no longer a soldier, having been discharged from the service some weeks before. On this ground the Secretary of War disapproved the action of the court martial. Yesterday application was made for a writ of habeas corpus to bring him before a civil court here. Judge Upton was absent from the city, but the County Judge, Hamilton, was applied to, who ordered the writ to issue, making it returnable at eleven o'clock. At that hour, Bird was brought before the Court, but counsel were not ready to proceed. Finally application was made to Judge Deady of the U S. Court for another writ, which was granted, and the prisoner ordered to be brought before him on Wednesday morning. It appears that Bird was charged some time before the homicide with another offence at Sitka. A court-martial was constituted by Gen. Davis, who also preferred charges against him. By this court-martial he was ordered to be dismissed from the service. The papers were forwarded to Washington, but were disapproved because an officer has not, by military law, a right both to prefer charges and appoint the court-martial to try the offender. It was, therefore, ordered by the Department that Bird should receive his pay and allowances until he was regularly discharged. Thus the findings of two courts martial in his case have been disapproved. The man whom he killed at Sitka was Lieut. Cowan of the revenue service. There was an altercation between Bird and a man named Brady; the latter, it is asserted, struck Bird on the head with a billy and pushed him out of a door, when Bird drew a revolver which was accidentally discharged, the ball passing through the door and killing Lieut. Cowan. Such is the statement related to us. Bird was then arrested by the military, his citizen's dress taken off and a soldier's dress put on him; he was kept for a considerable time in custody at Sitka, and was finally brought to Vancouver and tried by court-martial. The case as it now stands seems to be a knotty one. It seems to be a question whether the civil authorities have jurisdiction; it having been decided that the military have not. There is no civil government in Alaska, and no provision has been made for the administration of justice in cases arising in that Territory. This is an important case, and its result will be awaited with some interest.

SUITS COMPROMISED.—It is stated to us that all the suits of the Lowndsdale heirs involving titles to property in this city have been adjusted, compromised and settled except those against I. A. Davenport and G. W. Vaughn, and one parcel of property in the upper part of the city about which the other claimants are having litigation. Many of the cases settled yet remain on the docket for pro forma orders for carrying out settlements. The end of this litigation will have a very favorable effect upon a good deal of property in the city.

THE SHIP PANAMA.—This vessel is commanded by Capt. H. M. Borstell. Her tonnage, registered, is 738.33 tons. She brought to Kalama 1,613 bars railroad iron and 877 packages of other railroad material, valued at $30,000. She brought to this city, for Hawley, Dodd & Co., 600 packages agricultural implements, valued at $10,000, and 56 casks coal.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.—We learn that Mr. J. B. Montgomery, the contractor on the Northern Pacific Railroad, is arranging his laborers' camps preparatory to commencing active work next Monday. The Dixie Thompson and the Rescue went down yesterday, loaded with material, tools, and subsistence supplies.

PICNIC EXCURSION.—The Sunday schools of Albany will make a picnic excursion to this city by railroad, next Thursday. There will be delegations also from Salem, Oregon City and other points along the road—to attend the Convention which will begin on that day.

CONCORDIA GROVE, U. A. O. D.—At the last meeting of this Grove, the following officers were installed by D. D. A. M. Jubitz: Otto Trauer, N. A.; H. Weber, V. A.; George Harold, R. S.; H. Ludwig, Treasurer; F. Matschcok, F. S.; C. Berthold, T. C.

SOCIABLE.—The ladies of the Baptist church will hold a sociable this (Tuesday) evening in the vestry of the church, corner of Fourth and Alder streets. The public are invited.

IMPORTANT TO SUFFERERS FROM NERVOUS EXCITEMENT.—A gentleman residing in Grammercy Place, New York, (whose name it would not be proper to mention), was suffering terribly about three weeks ago from the effects of dissipation. He could not sleep, vomited frequently, was tormented by horrible fancies, and could not keep a limb still. Opiates made him worse. While in this condition he was visited by a friend, who advised him to try PLANTATION BITTERS as an anodyne, stomachic and tonic. "No use," said the sick man, despondingly; "nothing will save me. I'm a gone case." "Pshaw!" said his friend, "you're worth forty dead men, yet! I'm going to doctor you now." So saying, he put on his hat and going to the nearest druggist, presently returned with a bottle of Bitters, of which he administered a dose forthwith. It had a soothing, cheering, tranquilizing effect. For a week thereafter the gentleman continued to take the tonic regularly, according to the directions, and at the end of that time was able to return to business in sound health and with a clear intellect. This information is furnished by Alexander T. Mintbrom, of Morrisania, who will confirm it if addressed by mail.

BE WISE TO-DAY.—'Tis madness to neglect a cough or cold. Consumption may follow, and though DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY cures the latter disease, yet the former disappear at once under its influence.

Burnett's Cooking Extracts are the best.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

NON EXPLOSIVE LAMPS.—Messrs. Marston & Quimby advertise the non-explosive lamp for kerosene. An examination of its structure will convince any one that it is just what they claim for it. Beside this it is an economical and convenient lamp, not only for offices and business houses, but for a light to use in the household. Its own qualities have so recommended it that it is meeting with very large sale.

AMUSEMENTS.

SKATING.—The rink will be open this forenoon, this afternoon and evening. A band of music will be in attendance in the evening. There were a considerable number of skaters present last evening.

Campaigns of Robert E Lee

[From the Galaxy for May]

I—THE SEVEN DAYS ON THE PENINSULA

On the 29th of May, 1862, the Federal army, 100,000 strong, under McClellan, reached the Chickahominy Its immediate object was the capture of Richmond, whither the Confederates, numbering 47 000, under J E Johnson, had fallen back ten days before. The Chickahominy, a little stream running through a broad belt of swamp, formed an admirable defensive line about ten miles in front of Richmond , for it could be crossed with artillery only by bridges For a space of twenty miles there was but one place an available military bridge could be constructed except by building long causeways through the swamp At this point there had been two bridges a mile apart, one known as Bottom s bridge, the other that over which passed the railroad from Richmond to York river The Confederates in their retreat had damaged the bridges so slightly that they were easily repaired in two or three days

Richmond was at this time wholly unfortified and the retreat of Johnson from Yorktown the moment he was seriously menaced should have convinced McClellan that his own force was greatly superior Nothing can be more evident than that the one thing for McClellan to do was to throw his whole force by these bridges across the stream and march directly upon the Confederate capital , for if, contrary to all likelihood, he should be worsted, the bridges furnished a perfectly safe way of retreat, and by destroying them behind him he could in an hour place the impassable Chickahominy between himself and any pursuit Instead of doing this, he sent a third of his army just across the stream, and stretched the remainder for eighteen miles along the northern bank His army then lay in the shape of a V, the left wing being six miles long, the right eighteen, and the river between He himself accurately describes the position in which he had placed his army "The only available means of uniting our force was to march the troops on the left or north bank of the Chickahominy down to Bottom's Bridge, and thence over the Williamsburg road, a distance of about twenty-three miles In the condition of the roads at that time, this march could not be made with artillery in less than two days' In a word, he divided his army in the face of the enemy, placing a two days' march between the portions This initial error as will be seen, was repeated and exaggerated during the whole campaign which ensued

Johnston, whose force had now been augmented to 67,000 men, could not fail to perceive the opportunity presented to him On the 31st of May he made a sudden onslaught upon that part of McClellan s force south of the Chickahominy. For this he had designed to employ fully 50,000 men, but Huger blundered, and the attack was made with barely 30,000 As it was, it narrowly missed of success at the Seven Pines But Sumner, who, owing to the illness of McClellan, was then in actual command, hurried a division across a half-submerged bridge which had been with difficulty constructed, restored the balance, and on the following day drove the Confederates back in disorder to Richmond

Toward night on the 31st Johnston was severely wounded, and the command of the Confederates devolved upon G. W. Smith, who two days after was disabled by a paralytic stroke, and on the 2d of June Lee was appointed to the chief command. For some months he had nominally been merely superintendent of fortifications, though really acting as Secretary of War While awaiting the movements of the enemy he set himself at work to surround Richmond with a strong line of intrenchments McClellan, untaught by the sharp lesson which he had received, kept on in his old way. In three weeks he had got eleven bridges built, over which on the 20th of June he passed half of the force which had been lying along the north bank of the Chickahominy, where Porter was still left with about 36,000 men.

McClellan had now made up his mind to begin offensive operations On the 25th his picket lines were advanced, "preparatory," as he said, "to a general forward movement." At 5 o'clock in the afternoon he telegraphed to the President that everything had succeeded An hour an a half later he sent quite a different dispatch Beauregard and Jackson, he said, had joined Lee, raising the Confederate force to 200,000, and he should probably be attacked the next day For the rest—Beauregard, sick and without any command, was in Georgia , Jackson was a day and a half away, and even including his force of 30,000, the whole Confederate army numbered barely 100,000 men of all arms, instead of 200,000

Lee had matured his plan of attack It involved in a more egregious form the very error which McClellan had committed He divided his army into two parts incapable of mutual support The forces on each side were nearly equal , neither varied by more than 5,000 from 100,000 Lee's plan was to leave Magruder with 25,000 men before Richmond, a few thousand more under Holmes before Fort Darling across the James river, while the three divisions of A P Hill, Longstreet, and D H Hill, 35,000 strong, were to cross the Chickahominy above McClellan's extreme right, and, uniting with Jackson, who with 30,000 was moving down from the Shenandoah, fall upon the Federal force, the bulk of which Lee supposed to be still on the north side of the river. But, as it happened, Porter with 36,000 was all there was on that side, the other 70,000 being already across. Early on the morning of the 26th Longstreet and the Hills, having marched since midnight, were concentrated opposite the extreme Federal right , but Jackson was a whole day's march behind time Weary of waiting, A P Hill crossed the Chickahominy, here a mere brook, and fell upon the Federal outposts held by two brigades, at Mechanicsville They were strongly posted on the bank of a creek The Confederates were repulsed with a loss of 1,500, the Federal losing but 300 Thus commenced the so called "Seven Days' Battles," although they were really comprised within six days

McClellan had that very morning resolved to do what he should have done weeks before —cross the Chickahominy with all his force, and change his base of operation and supply from the York river to the James The brigades at Mechanicsville were quietly withdrawn, and on the morning of the 27th all the troops on that side of the river were concentrated near Cold Harbor Here in the afternoon a fierce battle was fought between Porter's 36,000 and the Confederates, who, Jackson having come up, numbered after their losses 63,000 The Federals were defeated, although the enemy advancing under a hot artillery fire lost fully 9,500, the Federal loss being about 7,500, of whom nearly 3 000 were prisoners Had McClellan sent back a seventh part of the 70,000 which he had actually unengaged across the river, Lee must have been repulsed. Or had Porter felled the trees in his front and thus formed barricades, he could have easily held his ground , but unluckily the axes had all been taken over, and when Porter perceiving the approach of the enemy, sent to ask for axes, the officer, who happened to be half deaf, misunderstood his message Neither until it was too late did McClellan attempt to reinforce Porter, for he had been amused all day by showy demonstrations from the Confederates on his side of the stream

The action at Cold Harbor was in every way an error on the part of McClellan He was under no necessity of fighting at all Hours before it commenced he could easily have got every man and every gun across the Chickahominy, and Lee would have had his two days march for nothing , and before he could retrace his steps Richmond might have been taken , and at that time its fall would have insured the destruction of the Confederate army, for outside of the city Lee had not provisions for a week Or if the battle was to be fought, McClellan could easily in two hours have sent over a sufficient force to insure victory

Lee's position on the morning of the 28th was one of extreme peril He had indeed won a formal victory, but at a heavy loss, and with only the result that McClellan had done just what he meant to do without a battle He had crossed the Chickahominy, and with fully 90,000 men was in front of Richmond, defended only by 25,000, stretched along a line of ten miles For all purposes of defending the city Lee's remaining 53,000 on the north of the river might as well have been a hundred miles away. Of all possible things to be done, McClellan chose the only one which could have relieved Lee from his peril. Instead of attacking Richmond, or even remaining where he was, he resolved to retreat to the James.

This retreat, euphemistically styled a 'change of base,' was in itself a simple operation, and with the most ordinary precautions could have been performed without molestation. He had only to destroy the bridges which he had built. But by some incomprehensible negligence these were so slightly damaged that the Confederates rebuilt them in a few hours McClellan, abandoning his sick and wounded, set out on his retreat, sending on in advance a herd of 2,500 cattle and his long train, which in a single line would have extended forty miles Yet even this could convey only a part of his stores and immense quantities of which were destroyed On the 29th his rear-guard was attacked at Savage's Station by a few regiments from Richmond, and sustained considerable loss

Lee, finding the passage of the Chickahominy perfectly feasible by the bridges with which McClellan had kindly provided him, attempted a grand stroke of strategy Jackson and D H Hill were to follow hard after the retreating Federals, while Longstreet and A P Hill were to make a long detour, and, joined by Magruder, to strike the flank of the column He hoped to cut this in two, and drive the half of it back upon Jackson, and between the two to annihilate it Strangely enough, the Confederates had neglected to make themselves acquainted with the roads lying around Richmond, Magruder lost his way in the swamp, and failed to co operate Longstreet and Hill, after a weary march, fell on the afternoon of the 30th upon the center of the Federal column, near Frazer s farm Jackson had come up with the Federal rear but was checked by a battery which covered the only ford across a creek which run through the swamp, and though in full hearing of the battle could render no assistance Hill and Longstreet attacked furiously but were unable to effect their purpose. Darkness put an end to the action, or rather group of engagements, and the Federal column, pursuing its retreat, took up an admirable position at Malvern Hill Longstreet and Hill had five days before marched from Richmond with 21,000 men In three engagements they had lost 8,200 killed and wounded, and the remainder were so exhausted that they were not able to fire a gun in the action of the next day

In the action at Malvern Hill, July 1st, Lee committed every possible error The enemy considerably outnumbered him, and were in a position which could be held against a double force Lee attacked in driblets with only a part of his force Jackson made an attempt on the right, and was speedily repulsed by an artillery fire. Lee ordered him and Magruder to again attack "with a yell' The charge was vigorously made, but without a gleam of success, the assailants being everywhere swept back in hopeless confusion, losing 4,500 men, double the loss which they inflicted. It was not merely a defeat, but a rout What must have been the surprise of Lee when as the rainy morning broke he saw the Federal position abandoned McClellan had not merely continued his retreat, but had fled from a complete victory as though from a field irretrievably lost

In these "Seven Days' Battles' the entire Confederate loss was 19,400, of whom 18,400 were killed and wounded, and 1,000 missing The Federal loss is officially stated at 15,249 of whom 9,291 were killed and wounded, and 5,958 missing , but probably many hundreds put down as "missing" were really among the killed. Reviewing the campaign, it may be affirmed that there has rarely been better fighting and never worse generalship than were displayed on both sides Where everything from beginning to end was a series of blunders, the commander who happened to make the last great error must lose When McClellan fled from Malvern Hill, without even attempting a blow against a beaten enemy, he committed the final blunder, and so Lee won in spite of himself The siege of Richmond was raised, and thereby the Confederacy gained almost three more years of life.

"Have you 'Blasted Hopes'" asked a lady of a green librarian, whose face was much swollen by a toothache. "No ma'am," he replied, ' but I have a blastedtootache."

[From the Galaxy for May]

I—THE SEVEN DAYS ON THE PENINSULA

On the 20th of May 1862 the Federal army 100 000 strong under McClellan reached the Chickahominy Its immediate object was the capture of Richmond whither the Confederates numbering 47 000 under J E Johnson had fallen back ten days before The Chickahominy a little stream running through a broad belt of swamp, formed an admirable defensive line about ten miles in front of Richmond for it could be crossed with artillery only by bridges For a space of twenty miles there was but one place an available military bridge could be constructed except by building long causeways through the swamp At this point there had been two bridges a mile apart one known as Bottom s bridge the other that over which passed the railroad from Richmond to York river The Confederates in their retreat had damaged the bridges so slightly that they were easily repaired in two or three days

Richmond was at this time wholly unfortified and the retreat of Johnson from Yorktown the moment he was seriously menaced should have convinced McClellan that his own force was greatly superior Nothing can be more evident than that the one thing for McClellan to do was to throw his whole force by these bridges across the stream and march directly upon the Confederate capital for if, contrary to all likelihood he should be worsted, the bridges furnished a perfectly safe way of retreat and by destroying them behind him he could in an hour place the impassable Chickahominy between himself and any pursuit Instead of doing this, he sent a third of his army just across the stream and stretched the remainder for eighteen miles along the northern bank His army then lay in the shape of a V, the left wing being six miles long, the right eighteen and the river between He himself accurately describes the position in which he had placed his army "The only available means of uniting our force was to march the troops on the north bank of the Chickahominy to Bottom s Bridge, and thence over the Williamsburg road a distance of about twenty three miles In the condition of the roads at that time, this march could not be made with artillery in less than two days [illegible] ed he divided his army in the face of the enemy placing a two days march between the portions This initial error as will be seen, was repeated and exaggerated during the whole campaign which ensued Johnston whose force had now been augmented to 67 000 men, could not fail to perceive the opportunity presented to him On the 31st of May he made a sudden onslaught upon that part of McClellan s force south of the Chickahominy For this he had designed to employ fully 50 000 men but Huger [illegible] and the attack was made with 30 000 As it was, it narrowly missed [illegible] at the Seven Pines But Sumner, [illegible] to the illness of McClellan, was in actual command, hurried a division across a half submerged bridge which had with difficulty constructed restored the [illegible] and on the following day drove the Confederates back in disorder to Richmond [illegible] night on the 31st Johnston was severely wounded and the command of the Confederates devolved upon G W. Smith [illegible] days after was disabled by a paralytic [illegible] and on the 2d of June Lee was appointed to the chief command For some [illegible] had nominally been merely super [illegible] fortifications though really acting [illegible] of War While awaiting the [illegible] the enemy he set himself at work [illegible] Richmond with a strong line of [illegible] McClellan untaught by the [illegible] which he had received kept on [illegible] three weeks he had got eleven [illegible] over which on the 20th of [illegible] half of the force which had [illegible] the north bank of the Chickahominy [illegible] Porter was still left with [illegible] men

McClellan had now made up his mind to [illegible] operations On the 25th his [illegible] were advanced, preparatory, [illegible] a general forward movement. [illegible] in the afternoon he telegraphed [illegible] that everything had succeeded [illegible] hour an a half later he sent quite a [illegible] despatch Beauregard and Jackson, [illegible] joined Lee, raising the Confederate [illegible] 200 000 and he should probably [illegible] the next day For the rest— [illegible] and without any command [illegible] Jackson was a day and a [illegible] and even including his force of [illegible] whole Confederate army numbered [illegible] 000 men of all arms instead of 200 000

Lee [illegible] matured his plan of attack It involved [illegible] a more egregious form the very error which McClellan had committed He [illegible] his army into two parts incapable of mutual support The forces on each side were nearly equal neither varied by more than [illegible] 100 000 Lee s plan was to leave Magruder with 25,000 men before [illegible] thousand more under [illegible] Darling across the James [illegible] divisions of A P Hill, [illegible] Hill 35 000 strong [illegible] army above Mechanicsville [illegible] and, uniting with [illegible] with [illegible] was moving down [illegible] upon the Federal [illegible] supposed to be [illegible] river But, as [illegible] 000 was all there [illegible] other 70,000 being al[illegible] Early on the morning of the [illegible] and the Hills, having marched [illegible] were concentrated opposite [illegible] the Federal right, but Jackson was [illegible] march behind time Weary of [illegible] Hill crossed the Chickahominy [illegible] took and fell upon the Federal [illegible] two brigades, at Mechanics[illegible] were strongly posted on the [illegible] The Confederates were repulsed with a loss of 1,500 the Federal losing [illegible] Thus commenced the so-called Seven Days Battles, although they were comprised within six days

McClellan had that very morning resolved [illegible] he should have done weeks before [illegible] the Chickahominy with all his force, [illegible] his base of operation and supply from the York river to the James The [illegible] Mechanicsville were quietly withdrawn [illegible] on the morning of the 27th all the [illegible] side of the river were concentrated [illegible] Cold Harbor Here in the afternoon [illegible] battle was fought between [illegible] 000 and the Confederates who, [illegible] coming up, numbered after [illegible] 63 000 The Federals were de[illegible] though the enemy advancing under [illegible] artillery fire lost fully 9,500, the Federal [illegible] losing about 7,500 of whom nearly [illegible] were prisoners Had McClellan sent [illegible] seventh part of the 70,000 which he [illegible] lay totally unengaged across the river, Lee must have been repulsed Or had Porter felled the trees in his front and thus formed barricades, he could have easily held his ground, but unluckily the axes had all been taken over and when Porter perceiving the approach of the enemy sent to ask for axes the officer who happened to be half deaf misunderstood his message Neither until it was too late did McClellan attempt to reinforce Porter, for he had been amused all day by showy demonstrations from the Confederates on his side of the stream

The action at Cold Harbor was in every way an error on the part of McClellan He was under no necessity of fighting at all Hours before it commenced he could easily have got every man and every gun across the Chickahominy, and Lee would have had his two days march for nothing and before he could retrace his steps Richmond might have been taken , and at that time its fall would have insured the destruction of the Confederate army, for outside of the city Lee had not provisions for a week Or if the battle was to be fought, McClellan could easily in two hours have sent over a sufficient force to insure victory

Lee s position on the morning of the 28th was one of extreme peril He had indeed won a formal victory, but at a heavy loss, and with only the result that McClellan had done just what he meant to do without a battle He had crossed the Chickahominy, and with fully 90 000 men was in front of Richmond, defended only by 25,000 stretched along a line of ten miles For all purposes of defending the city Lee s remaining 53,000 on the north of the river might as well have been a hundred miles away Of all possible things to be done McClellan chose the only one which could have relieved Lee from his peril Instead of attacking Richmond, or even remaining where he was he resolved to retreat to the James.

This retreat, euphemistically styled a 'change of base,' was in itself a simple operation, and with the most ordinary precautions could have been performed without molestation. He had only to destroy the bridges which he had built. But by some incomprehensible negligence these were so slightly damaged that the Confederates rebuilt them in a few hours McClellan, abandoning his sick and wounded set out on his retreat sending on in advance a herd of 2,500 cattle and his long train, which in a single line would have extended forty miles Yet even this could convey only a part of his stores and munitions immense quantities of which were destroyed On the 29th his rear guard was attacked at Savage s Station by a few regiments from Richmond, and sustained considerable loss

Lee finding the passage of the Chickahominy perfectly feasible by the bridges with which McClellan had kindly provided him attempted a grand stroke of strategy Jackson and D H Hill were to follow hard after the retreating Federals while Longstreet and A P Hill were to make a long detour, and joined by Magruder to strike the flank of the column He hoped to cut this in two and drive the half of it back upon Jackson and between the two to annihilate it Strangely enough the Confederates had neglected to make themselves acquainted with the roads lying around Richmond Magruder lost his way in the swamp and failed to co operate Longstreet and Hill, after a weary march, fell on the afternoon of the 30th upon the center of the Federal column near Frazer s farm Jackson had come up with the Federal rear but was checked by a battery which covered the only ford across a creek which ran through the swamp and though in full hearing of the battle could render no assistance Hill and Longstreet attacked furiously but were unable to effect their purpose. Darkness put an end to the action, or rather group of engagements, and the Federal column, pursuing its retreat, took up an admirable position at Malvern Hill Longstreet and Hill had five days before marched from Richmond with 24 000 men In three engagements they had lost 8,200 killed and wounded and the remainder were so exhausted that they were not able to fire a gun in the action of the next day

In the action at Malvern Hill, July 1st, Lee committed every possible error The enemy considerably outnumbered him and were in a position which could be held against a double force Lee attacked in driblets with only a part of his force Jackson made an attempt on the right, and was speedily repulsed by an artillery fire Lee ordered him and Magruder to again attack 'with a yell The charge was vigorously made, but without a gleam of success, the assailants being everywhere swept back in hopeless confusion, losing 4,500 men, double the loss which they inflicted It was not merely a defeat but a rout What must have been the surprise of Lee when as the rainy morning broke he saw the Federal position abandoned McClellan had not merely continued his retreat but had fled from a complete victory as though from a field irretrievably lost.

In these ' Seven Days' Battles the entire Confederate loss was 19 400, of whom 18,400 were killed and wounded, and 1,000 missing The Federal loss is officially stated at 15 249 of whom 9,291 were killed and wounded and 5 958 missing but probably many hundreds put down as "missing' were really among the killed, Reviewing the campaign, it may be affirmed that there has rarely been better fighting and never worse generalship than were displayed on both sides Where everything from beginning to end was a series of blunders, the commander who happened to make the last great error must lose When McClellan fled from Malvern Hill, without even attempting a blow against a beaten enemy he committed the final blunder, and so Lee won in spite of himself The siege of Richmond was raised, and thereby the Confederacy gained almost three more years of life

"Have you Blasted Hopes'' asked a lady of a green librarian whose face was much swollen by a toothache "No ma am,' he replied, "but I have a blastedtootache "
